Realty Boards of District Join in Meeting Here

Development Plans of Bay Waterfront Are Shown Here

The enormous advantages which will accrue to the whole peninsula district by the development of manufacturing and shipping from San Francisco and particularly from that section of the peninsula being developed under the name of Port San Francisco, F. D. Cornell, president of the Bay Terminals Company yesterday addressed a gathering of realtors from Redwood City, San Carlos San Mateo, Burlingame and Palo Alto at the Sequoia hotel.

Cornell outlined the great developments which his company intends to make in the marsh lands between Redwood City and Belmont, and with the aid o maps showed that this particular region is exceptionally well fitted for industrial and commercial development.

In connection with the proposed industrial development of this region Cornell said in part:

"After all is said and done, industry is the blood stream of any great city, and if the blood stream is not properly built up, we become anemic and momentum dwindles. You know, when an easterner comes to San Francisco and begins to take inventory o his great natural resources, he is amazed to find a group of conditions such as cannot likely be found in any other city in the en tire world. In the first place, it is beyond any chance for argument that the bay of San Francisco is the greatest natura harbor in the world. Its relation to the United States in the anticipated growth of our foreign commerce, destines it to be in the strategic gateway for our future exploitation, such as no other por of the United States can hope to equal because our foreign trade must continue to come in ever increasing ration from those nations bordering the Pacific.

"Then again, we find that San Francisco is the focal point of distribution of the entire Pacific slope. San Francisco is the golden heart of the "Golden State' and last, we find again that here we have a city bounded with valleys which are more porductive than any like area in the entire world and development possibilities as yet unmeasured.

"The necessity for aggressive and progressive policies was forcefully urged upon the assembled real estate men by the speaker.

"Why don't some of you men,' he said "give constructive thought to the development of major manufacturing facilities of many raw products originating here and which you now ship eastward and later have them returned from far eastern points as finished goods? Why not eliminate this economic waste, put money in your own pocket in the process and add that wealth of real values of $2500 per head resultan from new industrial growth?

"Just why you have not given serious thought to industrial development of this great peninsula years before now is to me a mystery, especially when you have such an ideal situation as exists at Port San Francisco, where there lies over 4000 acres of the finest industrial land in the world.

"County lines are imaginary barriers and had you realtors forcefully backed up Chief Engineer O'Shaughnessy years ago in his urge and recommendations for proper highways leading south ward, if you had only realized that God gave you more to play with than anybody else in the world, the San Francisco Bay Terminals Company would not now be developing this great deep water industrial port for you would have done so ten or fifteen years ago at least.

"As a result of which you would have retained here many of these industries that came here from choice and who left because you were "out of stock."

"Just a word as to the reasons for the location of Port San Francisco, just a look at this geodetic map you will see a thing which surprised me greatly, that the deep water channel of this bay is for the most part removed from the land making deep water development costly. You will notice the land at Port San Francisco is closer to the deep water channel than any lands outside the main wharves of the city proper, and instead of silting up the channel in the south bay is scouring deeper. I recommend that every real estate office in San Francisco get one of these government geodetic maps and familiarize yourselves with exact conditions.

"Again think, if you please, of an area of 4100 acres of land extending from the bay inland a distance of a fraction more than 3 miles joining the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad, and your present boulevards, and traversed by the great Bayshore highway which all of your forward looking men are urging you to help push through. Think of this land assembled at an acreage cost of less than $130 per acre.

"Here is a perfect combination of water, rail and highway combination, our harbor being developed along most modern lines brings the channel into the land instead of projecting piers into the water and by this means we gain in wharfage space.

"The entire cost of development giving completed facilities of the finest sort is so low tha we can out-compete with any location on the Pacific Coast. Our Unit No. 1 will provide more birth place than the entire Los Angeles harbor, and our tota acreage is equal to 1-6 the entir area of the city and county o San Francisco.

"Here we have the proper location for industries of all sorts large and small, those who nee to be directly on deep water, o those who just need good reasonably priced land with good high way and rail connection.

"The skeptic who cannot see the great future of San Francisco through our industrial development of Port San Francisco, I can show him that we have an immediate potential market right in San Francisco itself.

"You have here today many factories—1 story affairs, around which in the march of progres property values have advanced year by year so that you find a overcrowded, antiquated plants expensive transportation, due to increasing congestion with presen land values of $2 to $17 per square foot. Think of this frozen land, profit on which these fellows are paying taxes. This land should be used for other purposes—these manufacturers should liquidate this frozen land profit into working capital in a modern plant on cheap acreage at Port San Francisco."

Following the address at the hotel the real estate men were shown over the site of Port San Francisco, and the plans of the San Francisco Bay Terminals Company were explained to them.

Plant is Scene of Big Fire

Damage to the extent of $25,000 was done to the plant of the Peninsula Paving Co. of this city situated on the Middlefield road early yesterday morning, by a fire which completely destroyed the road oiling plant of the concern. The origin of the fire has not been determined, but when discovered the flames were surrounding a large tank of oil which soon burst into flames. Before the fire was extinguished by the local fire department the whole section of the plant devoted to preparing the oil had been reduced to ashes.

Two trucks were burned in the fire, one completely destroyed and the other so badly damaged that it will be out of service for several weeks.

The plant of the Peninsula Paving Co. was built more than two years ago and represents an investment of more than $50,000. It is located between the Middlefield road and the railroad track. It is served from the latter by a spur track. The firm has been doing a large road building business here since its establishment.

1000 ACRES BURNED IN PASTURAGE BLAZE

In a fire that swept more than a thousand acres of pasture land and brush wood yesterday afternoon in the hills back of Redwood City grass and hay valued at several thousand dollars went up in smoke before a crew of men under County Fire Warden Ber Werder could bring the flames under control.

The fire started near the water tank of the Happy Land tract, and carried before a stiff wind, soon had covered several hill sides in the district north of the West Union road. Most of the land burned over is in the tract now known as Palomar Park, formerly the Alice Chalmers property.

The fire was reported about noon yesterday and a call was sent in for volunteer firemen. A number responded, and lead by Werder worked until a late hour last evening in fighting the flames. It was thought for a time that the fire might reach the Canyon Sanitarium near the summit of the first range of hills, but by backfiring and beating with wet sacks, as well as by the use of fire trails cut through the underbrush the flames were halted before this point was reached. The path of the fire is estmated at about a mile and a half.

Pratt-Low Co. Leases Large Buildings Here

The plant of the Silvergate Cannery Company on the highway, just south of Five Points, has been leased this week by the Pratt Low Preserving Company as a warehouse to store a large stock of goods being canned at the Pratt Low plant here this year. The Pratt-Low Company has made arrangements to have the buildings which were never completed, furnished with concrete floors and put into shape for warehouse use.

The need of additional warehouse space was caused by an unusually late and large croo of fruit and the warehouse space of the local plant has been filled to capocity with a surplus. The labeling department will also be installed in the new location.

The Silver Gate plant was built at an enormous expense several years ago, but the concern ran short of funds before the plant was completed, and the buildings have stood since that time vacant and without floors. The buildings are or re-enforced concrete and are ideal for factory or warehouse purposes.

Prominent Man In School Work Slated For Place

Roy W. Cloud, for the past two years city superintendent of schools of Redwood City, yesterday tendered his resignation to that position, and has accepted the office of executive secretary of the California State Teachers' Association with offices in the Phelan building in San Francisco. The appointment came unexpectedly and his resignation to the post in the local school was a great surprise to the many friends of the local man throughout the state.

Previous to his acceptance of the office of city superintendent of schools, to which he succeeded A. E. Monteith, Cloud had been superintendent of schools of San Mateo county for 19 years. In both of these positions he had exhibited rare ability and had earned the reputation of being one of the outstanding educators of the state. He had served for a term as president of the State Teachers' Association, and was always in demand as a lecturer before institutes of teachers in all parts of the state.

No definite appointment had been made by the board of school trustees yesterday of a successor to Cloud as superintendent of the local schools. John Gill, however, assistant principal of the Sequoia Union High School is mentioned as the most likely candidate for the position. The board will make the appointment within the near future as Cloud will assume his new duties on the first of September.

A new California industry, made possible by the development of new machinery, is announced at the Johns-Manville Corporation plant at Pittsburg, this State. Quantity production is to begin at once on a new type of permanent fireproof asbestos shingle and special patented new machinery has been installed. High hydraulic pressures are made possible with the new equipment, which will produce a rigid shingle made of asbestos and Portland cement in new shapes, including hexagonal, and in several permanent colors. The hexagonal shingle originated in France but it is being widely adopted in this country because it gives an entirely new appearance to the roof, harmonizing particularly with modern American adaptations of the established styles and also because of the unusual color effects possible.

Motorists visiting Yosemite National Park should bear in mind that the new speed limit of 40 miles an hour, made effective by State law, is not applicable to roads in Yosemite, says a statement issued this week by the California State Automobile Association. According to George S. Grant, manager of the Association Touring Bureau, many motorists have been running afoul of the Federal government regulations in the valley under the erroneous impression that the 40 mile limit prevailed there. Regulations fixed by the National Park Service are the rules of the road there.

FAMOUS MINING STRIKES

By THOMAS E. STEWARD

Diggings at Deadwood

THE financial panic of 1857 was a prime influence in bringing about the rush of prospectors into the hills of Colorado in that year which led to the discovery of many famous mines and resulted directly in the founding of Denver and Boulder, both in 1858, and of many minor settlements.

Business uncertainties resulting from the panic made many daring souls willing to risk their future in the Western wilderness in an effort to recoup losses in business. At about the same time a small amount of gold was collected and exhibited by a party of civilized Cherokee Indians, who said they had found it in the Colorado hills.

Early in 1858 a party of Georgians, headed by W. J. Russell, went into what was then called the Pike's Peak country in search of gold. They finally made a minor strike at the mouth of a gulch leading into the Platte river about seven miles below the present site of Denver, and when news of this find reached the outside world, the rush to Colorado began.

Clear Creek county, destined to become one of Colorado's richest mining districts, first yielded precious metal in April, 1859, when one George A. Jackson made a strike on what was called Chicago creek. That year was marked by an influx of prospectors who not only explored streams along the foothills of the Rockies but penetrated deeply into the mountains. The "Deadwood Diggings" were developed on South Boulder creek, and the history of Colorado as one of the nation's richest sources of metallic ore and metal had begun.

Discovery of the lode or actual vein from which placer gold previously found had been washed down, soon followed when John H. Gregory located what was called the Gregory lode, also in Clear Creek county. Several lodes were found near Georgetown, then known as Elizabethtown, and in 1860 gold diggings were located in the Upper Union or Empire district.

As a consequence of these discoveries and the inrush of population, congress passed a bill on February 26, 1861, organizing the territory of Colorado. Col. William Gilpin soon after was appointed the first territorial governor.

Settlement of the Colorado mining districts was accompanied by the usual riotous camp life, with many violent deaths, over-gay dance halls, and repeated instances of fortunes easily snatched from nature and as easily spun away across the gambling tables of the towns.

1849—The Marvelous Year

ABOUT a year after the discovery of gold at Sutter's mill, the gold of California began to attract the greatest influx of immigrants that America had known up to that time. People from all sections of Europe made their way overland, across Panama or around the "Horn" to join the bearded crowds of rough, gay, adventurous men and youths who were seeking fortune along the golden streams of that most westerly state.

The output of gold from the new diggings on the Feather, Yuba, American and Stanislaus rivers surpassed anything the world had known. Some miners, working with crude methods, made as much as $5,000 in a single day. When all the printers, and readers, too, of the Californian had gone off gold digging, the publisher decided to combine a tour of the gold camps with a little digging venture of his own. Upon his return, when he resumed publication, he reported that he had easily made from $44 to $150 a day with his pan, and had averaged about $100.

Gold dust became the currency of the period, but it was produced so rapidly that it dropped in price from $18 to about $4 an ounce and prices rose proportionately, as always happens when a currency depreciates.

Until the formation of the Vigilance committees there was no law but that of the fist, the pistol and the bowie knife.

These placer operations actually no more than scratched the surface of the placer and gravel gold deposits of California, but they came to yield as high as $50,000,000 a year in the period from 1850 to 1853. Then the output started to go down, due to the fact that many of the more easily worked diggings had been exhausted and machinery had not been devised that enabled the miners to work the deep and heavy gravel deposits.

The first of the placer tools was the pan, which a man held in his hand. He kept it under water until the heavier gravel had been washed away, then gradually let out the lighter stuff, while the gold sank to the bottom. When he had finished a pan he set its contents aside to dry, after which the light sand remaining was blown away and only the heavy gold dust remained. After the pan came the cradle or rocker, and it in turn gave way to a more scientific and larger rocker known as the "Long Tom." Eventually, when capital began to help in the development, "fluming" was introduced. In this process a flume or canal was built through which the entire flow of a stream was diverted so that the miners might work the gold bearing sand and gravel in the river bottom.

Children Need Food

While soft cereals and soft foods in general make up an important part of the average child's diet, every youngster should have at least one hard crunchy food every day. That in substance is the opinion expressed by leading American dentists among whom a survey was recently conducted. Hard foods, dentists say, not only exercise a child's teeth and gums, but certain kinds supply such health essentials as lime, which is a bone and tooth builder.

Uniform Traffic Regulations Would Reduce Accidents

UNIFORM traffic laws for pedestrian and driver should be adopted throughout the United States.

In one state where records show that for every thousand automobiles in the state, one person is killed each year and seven are injured, there is a loss of more than $100,000,00 a year traceable to street and highway accidents.

As long as one city has one set of traffic laws while the next city has different regulations, there will be a heavy traffic toll. With the great amount of tourist traffic, uniform laws should not be confined to the cities of a single state, but should be adopted by all states.

In no field is there such conspicuous waste of both time and life as that caused by accidents on our streets and highways.

Realizing the importance of the movement to prevent automobile accidents, politicians have hit upon the idea of compulsory automobile liability insurance which, in theory, would "pay" for accidents after they have happened. The idea does not seem to work out as well as it sounds on paper And even if it did, compensation is not nearly so important as prevention of accidents.

Enactment of uniform traffic regulations throughout the country, and their enforcement, would probably do more than anything else to curb automobile accidents.

Safety and the Jay Walker

SPEAKING of automobile accidents brings to mind one individual who is constantly courting disaster, not only to himself but to every motorist who drives along the congested street of a city—that is the jay walker—the chap who dives out unexpectedly from behind a parked machine in the middle of the block and runs in front of your car. Or sometimes it's a woman who drags a family of small children across your path while all you have to do is slam on the brakes and do a series of acrobatics with the wheel. Just the other day the writer saw a man with two little children, one at each hand, step from behind a parked car on Main street, directly in front of an approaching automobile. He only looked to his right as he stepped into the traffic, and only for the slow speed of the approaching car and the quickness of the driver in applying his brakes was an accident avoided.

The question of the jay walker has been a burning one before many a city council. Ordinances have been made and broken; warnings have been posted and disregarded, but in some parts of the country a solution has been met with; a solution, too, independent of laws, rules and regulatiins; dependent solely upon public opinion.

The solution is merely to laugh at the jay walker and "guy" him. In these cities when a person begins a perilous course across through the traffic in the middle of a block, the pedestrians on both sides of the street stop and laugh at him, ask him where he is from, and othewise cast sarcastic remarks. That is enough. For we are told, in these cities, jay wakling is a thing of the past. Such is the power of public opinion.

Dollars Do Not Grow on Trees

THE manner in which taxes are mounting and the staggering burdens they are putting upon all the people should give concern to every individual who has any interest in the future of our country. It seems to be easy to incur obligations and get into debt and correspondingly difficult to curtail extravagance and get free from our bond warrant and interest burdens.

While federal taxes have been reduced by hundreds of millions since 1921, state and local taxes have risen twice as fast as federal taxes have been reduced. Local taxes of municipalities and districts of one sort and another which are organized on various pretexts for the purpose of levying some new form of tax, are responsible for the orgy we are passing through.

Every tax dollar comes from the pockets of the people. It does not grow on money trees. Every dollar wasted or spent unnecessarily is a dollar of capital destroyed. It has ceased earning, developing and producing.

Business and property cannot forever endure this increasing drain, this steady confiscation of capital.

TWO SAVED FROM DEATH

Jumping from their car which was stalled on the track near San Carlos on Monday, saved the lives of Donald Hoover and Donald Purt both of Santa Cruz. The men tried to start the car, but seeing the approaching train nearly upon them, jumped. They cleared the track just as the train struck the car and completely wrecked it.

"TWELVE MILES OUT" A BREATHLESS TALE

John Gilbert Starred in This Thrilling Story of A Hijacker's Life

Breathless thrills and vivid romance await film fans in "Twelve Miles Out," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's mystery melodrama of the high seas which comes to the Sequoia Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

It is one of the fastest adventure stories of the season and John Gilbert's latest starring vehicle. Adapted from William Anthony McGuire's famous Broadway hit, it comes to the screen with added dramatic appeal. It tells the tale of rum-runners, hijackers, revenue cutters and tht kidnapping of beautiful women. Through it all runs one of the sweetest love stories ever screened. As the swashbuckling hero, Gilbert has an ideal role. He takes daredevil chances, stages desperate battles and follows the course of an amazing intrigue.

Joan Crawford makes a charming heroine, Ernest Torrenie a villain who is a strange mixture of sinister traits and whimsical humor. Others of the excellent shpporting cast are Tom O'Brien, Bert Roach, Elleen Percy and Edward Earle. Jack Conway directed.

SCHOOL DISTRICT BOUNDARIES TO BE CHANGED

The bounderies of three school districts were altered Monday by the board of supervisors at the request of County Superintendent of Schools Pansy Jewett Abbott. The districts involved were Laguna, Pilarcitos and San Mateo.

Miss Abbott explained that due to the falling off of registration in the Laguna district it had been abandoned in 1920. She then asked that that district be divided between Pilarcitos and San Mateo districts. Miss Abbott also asked that territory recently excluded from Hillsboruogh be added to the San Mateo school district. Assistant District Attorney Ed Scott drew up the necessary resolutions which were passed by the board.

PERMIT GRANTED FOR BUNKERS NEAR COLMA

A permit was granted by the board of supervisors Monday for the building of a spur track across Railroad avenue, near Colma. The action of the board followed weeks of argument for and against the proposition, protests being filed by the Lake Merritt Golf and Country Club, the Jefferson High School District and a number of private individuals.

It is understood that the granting of the permit for the spur track to the gravel company will be followed by the erection of sand and gravel bunkers on the company's property fronting in Junipero boulevard. This, it was contended, would tend to injure the values of property surrounding.

The granting of the permit was opposed by Supervisor Hickey, also voted against the measure, but the votes of the other members of the board were in favor of the permit which was accordingly granted.

County Roads Plowed Up Alleges Coast Woman

Charging that roadways dedicated to the county at Halfmoon Bay were rendered impassible because they were being plowed and cultivated by Mario Francisconi, George W. Webb and Lester Webb, Mrs. Petronella Caner sought to have the men's work declared a nuisance in an abatement suit filed this week in the Superior court here.

Mrs. Caner alleged that Venice boulevard was rendered dangerous in the winter and it was risky to drive an automobile over it. The defendants left plows and other farm implements in the road making it impassible. In addition their water trough was placed on one of the roads and their barns extended six feet over Venice boulevard. Their reservoir was two feet over the same street.

In addition to having the nuisance abated. Mrs. Caner asks $1000 damages against the three men.

EMIL JANNINGS SUPERB IN "WAY OF ALL FLESH"

Convincing proof that a great motion picthre need not necessarily be an epic in number of people used or the size of sets, is to be found at the Sequoia Theatre tonight, where Emil Jannings' first Paramount starring vehicle, "The Way of All Flesh" is now showing.

Here is the foremost motion picture actor of the world today in one of the most dramatically human, vital and gripping pictures the screen has ever shown.

"The Way of All Flesh" is a saga of sacrifcie, the coming of temptation in the life of a simple home-loving man, a powerful sermon on the frailty of mankind To see "The Way of All Flesh' with Jannings as the man who slew himself in the eyes of the world that his family might be spared shame, is to experience a flood of cleansing, thought-provoking emotions. There are laughs and tears; moments when the character seems to fairly speak aloud.

By no means is Jannings alone in this drama. Belle Bennet, Phyllis Haver, Donald Keith, Fred Kohler and the many others in the supporting cast give visual evidence that Paramount searched long and assiduously for those capable of giving that rarest of all rarities, a perfect characterization in the varied and exacting roles of a modern motion picture.

Victor Fleming, who directed, uses the camera as an accomplished spinner of stories uses words. At times his handling of the plot flashes with genius. Always it is true and convincing.

"The Way of All Flesh" will undoubtedly be classed as one of the foremost pictures ever filmed, and this reputation should endure for years to come.

Kellogg Appointed on Appraisal Board

At a special meeting of the board of trustees of Redwood City Tuesday evening Walter Kellogg, local manager of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., was appointed a member of the board of appraisers for the valuation of property involved in the Broadway extension. Kellogg was appointed to succeed Lester Prior, whose resignation was received by the board on the previous night.

The board consists of three members, the other two being Lawrence Heiner and E. B. Fox. The name of D. W. Williams was suggested as a successor to Prior, but after some consideration of the matter Williams declined to act on the board.

The members of the board have signified their intention of beginning work immediately, and it is thought that the work will be completed within three months.

Corrosion of the terminals on your car's battery can be prevented, according to the California State Automobile Association, by scraping and cleaning the terminals and applying a coat of vaseline.

C. of C. Meetings Resumed

The luncheon meetings of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, which were discontinued before the vacation season, were resumed this week. The first of the meetings was held Monday.

Commissioners Start Work

Among the speakers at Monday's meeting were Emmett Donnelley A. C. Argo, Fred Drake, Carl Mabie and D. R. Stafford."

Stafford briefly outlined the developments which have been made recently in Redwood City and those which can reasonably be expected within the near future. In his address Stafford said in part as follows:

"The one-cent gasoline tax is here and it spells success for the early completion of the Bayshore highway between San Francisco and San Jose. All that territory between Redwood City and Belmont and that between Redwood City and the Dumbarton bridge will take on the same growth that came to the Highlands when the limits of the city were extended but a few years ago.

"The Las Pulgas road—the new boulevard which will run from 19th avenue in San Francisco to Stanford University — will run through Redwood City on the westerly boundary and will greatly improve values in that vicinity

"Phelps street is open and traffic is using it to Dumbarton bridge

"Port San Francisco at San Carlos is attracting to itself the notice of many who are interested from an industrial location view and, as payrolls make cities, a few years hence will see a city spring up somewhere and Redwood City is the natural site for it.

"Our new grammar school will be finished and the new business block with the new theater will be under construction.

"A new hotel is to be erected in the Highlands.

"The Portland Cement Company has added another unit to their plant. Pratt-Low Cannery is working up to capacity.

"The extension of Broadway to Chestnut street will be under way and this improvement is going to change the whole condtion of the business district. Broadway when extended will permit the direct access to an industrial location that is bound to develop within a short period.

"Industrial sites are available at prices that will attract many to this city. Adjoining these sites are subdivisions that today are selling acreage as low as $1,500 an acre.

"I have today letters from five factories that are interested in a location at Redwood City. We will not attempt to locate them until we get started on the actual work of removing the Wahl and Thiele buildings at the head of Broadway."

Postmaster Mabie explained the improvements which it has been possible to secure for the local postoffice since it has been declared a first-class office.

Preparations Have Been Made For a Large Enrollment

As Sequoia Union High School opens Monday, August 22, registration of freshmen and other new pupils was taking place yesterday and today, August 18 and 19, at the high school office in order to avoid the confusion on Monday.

Monday the students are required to bring to school $3.50; $2 for towel fee, one dollar for student body dues, and 25 cents as a deposit on a corridor locker. The girls are required to bring 25 cents for S. G. S. dues, while the boys will have to pay 25 cents on a gym locker. Seniors are requested to bring their class dues, 75 cents.

The entire school building has been washed, shellacked, varnished and painted where it was needed. The first row of seats in the middle section of the auditorium has been removed to provide more space for the orchestra. This school term will find every room in use. The entire enrollment is expected to be 720.

Many changes have occurred in the faculty. Miss Eunice Schmidt will succeed Miss Mariam Blakeslee as Journalism and English teacher. Miss Blakeslee is to be married this fall. Miss Angelina Burns will be at the head of the English department but will teach no English. Mrs. Wooldridge, former head of that department is on a year's leave of absence while Mrs. Bess Balcombe will replace Mrs. Howard Ray as dramatics and public speaking coach. Miss Boyle will resume her position of dean of girls and English teacher after being absent a year and a half. Mrs. May H. Anderson from Stanford University will be a part time English teacher and Ramon Dimmick will take over Coach Kelly's work. Mr. Ferdinand Schraidt is in Germany on a year's leave of absence and Mr. S. S. Mayo will fill his place. Miss Helen Clark is the new full time French teacher.

S. F. Bridge Situation Is Outlined

VIEWS AS OUTLINED BY A BUSINESSMAN OF SAN FRANCISCO

Now that the Navy Department has definitely refused to grant a franchise for the bridge at the Rincon Hill site, we must admit that we are not sorry.

We never could see the economic necessity for this bridge. All it would do would be to join two already congested districts. It would not bring any new trade to San Francisco. It would merely make it convenient for more people to live in Oakland.

If San Francisco is to grow she must give up the idea that this very tiny metropolitan district, which she now covers, is the ultimate of her expected growth. San Francisco must be connected up with all that world empire to the east of us. She must become the natural gateway to the Orient. She must to herself become a manufacturing center where the large factories of the country will establish branches or where new industries will built up. Oakland is not, and should never be, the reservoir of our wealth. Our wealth should come from the handling of those commodities which originate in the east and go across the Pacific.

It is true that San Francisco Bay is a barrier, but the barrier can easly be broken by railroad bridges and automobile bridges comparatively inexpensive, stretching across the lower part of the bay where they will not interfere with bay navigation, and where they will open territory suitable for industrial development. Docks in New York stretch for miles up the North river and the Hudson river on both sides, and for miles up the East river and on Long Island Sound. There is no reason why docks should not extend all the way down San Francisco pay ar far as Redwood City. As a matter if fact if we are to grow we must extend dowa there. That is the territory we should open up. That is the territory we should look to for our future expansion. We want railroads to come direct from the east, cross the bay, and leave their passengers in San Francisco. We want railroad terminals developed where factories have room to grow and where workingmen can have suitable homes to live in That is the secret of Oakland's growth. That is the secret of Los Angeles's growth, and that is the secret of any large city's growth. Until San Francisco, and by San Francisco I mean the Peninsula as well, becomes the direct terminus of transcontinental railroads, she can never grow the way she should. She must sit back and watch her neighboring cities, and her rival to the south, receive that constant stream of wealth which only railroad systems can bring.

SCORES OF USES FOR ICE; AID TO BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Scores of uses for ice either unknown or not taken advantage of by the busy housewife, are enumerated in a report just given out by the California Association of Ice Industries. While the preservation of foodstuffs probably is nevertheless that product can be the most important function of ice, nevertheless that product can be an important factor in relieving the housewife of many other worries in her daily work.

"Where the local water supply is hard, melted ice comes in handy because it is always soft and ideal for washing delicate fabrics, the report points out. "Dirt and discoloration may be removed in the fabrics by careful rinsing, and often without soap. Melted ice also makes a pure drinking water if the ice is melted in clean, covered receptacles. Use melted ice in dyeing, as it readily absorbs the color, dissolving it uniformly and releasing color to the fabric in an even tint.

"To remove grease and fat from soups and stews, wrap a piece of ice in chees cloth and pass rapidly over the surface of the hot liquid. All grease will adhere to the cloth. Melted ice water in pie crusts makes light, short crusts, as many bakers have discovered. In making tea and coffee, the use of melted ice water calls for less tea or coffe per cup than ordinary water. The brew also holds all the fragrance and aroma of the tea leaf and coffee bean."

A welcome suggestion is that gum can be removed from children's dresses or hair by holding a piece of ice on the chewing gum. This hardens the gum so that it can be scraped off like dust. Another unusual use for ice, as listed in the report, is rubbing the ice over the cheeks for the improvement of the complexion. By stimulating blood circulation, this gives the cheeks a rosy flush.

Don't You Care!

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

Somebody always may excel you,
But don't you care!—
Others outplay you or outspell you,
But don't you care!
Prizes may not fall to you,
But in everything you do
You can have a purpose true,
So don't you care!

Somebody else may have more money,
But don't you care!
Somebody may be shrewder, Sonny,
But don't you care!
Others may wear finer things—
Silks and furs and diamond rings,
But you can have the joys love brings,
So don't you care!

Somebody may get more attention,
But don't you care!—
Or win the "honorable mention",
But don't you care!
If your work is nobly done,
Surely you can have the fun
Honest worth has always won,
So don't you care!

Kentucky Bred Colts To Race At State Fair

By J. Stanley Quinn

The largest and most select field of two-year-old colts and fillies that ever faced a starter in this state will take the word at the State Fair, September 3 to 10. These colts represent an investment of several thousand dollars each and have been trained with all the expert knowledge and patience of the score or more of trainers who will exhibit them during the fair.

A perusal of the entry list of the harness races that will be held on the track shows that thirty two-year-olds have been signed and paid on, making them eligible to start. Of these, nineteen are trotters, among whom are to be found colts sired by the leading trotting horse stallions in the country.

Some of the sires of these colts are Chestnut Peter, Signal Poter, Peter Pluto, Double Peter, Guy Great and The Senator, all sons of that champion of all trotting horse stallions, Peter the Great.

These colts have been brought out from Kentucky, with no little expense to their owners, to help raise the standard of the trotters in California. These two-year-olds have all been working miles between 2:15 and 2:30, with some showing exceptional halves and quarters. Those colts will perform Monday, September 5 on the same program with the three-year-old pacers.

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

IN VISIBLE RAYS, NOT HEAT RAYS OF THE SUN, DO THE BURNING

By Dr. Charles M. Williams, M. D.
New York City

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

What is the cause of sunburn? It is the part of the sun's rays at the blue end of the spectrum, and the invisible rays beyond the blue.

The red rays of the sun have little chemical action, and little effect on the skin beyond making it feel warm, while the rays at the other end of the spectrum, the blue end, and those beyond them, have a powerful action and a very decided effect on the skin. It is these rays that cause sunburn.

These violet and ultra-violet rays, powerful as they are, have little penetrating power. They are much more easily stopped than the red rays.

Mountain climbers can be sunburned when the temperature is away below freezing, but the mystery vanishes when we remember that the presence or absence of heat rays does not count. It is the blue rays that are important, and on a snow-capped peak the air is thin and pure, so that there is nothing to stop the light. And besides that, the white snow reflects the light almost as would a mirror.

When ever the light is clear and the region about one reflects light strongly, one sees the same result. The seashore is notorious for sunburn, partly on account of the pure air, partly on account of light reflected from the water and the white sand, and partly also because it is a region where people love to dispense with the protection of clothing.

Light reflected from rocks and sand of the desert and arid mountain regions is very powerful, while the softer light reflected from green fields and forests is harmless. Mist and fog stop many of the chemically active rays, and even a thin sheet of tissue paper will give a great deal of protection

The effect of sunlight on the skin depands not only on the amount of light, but on the kind of skin, and dark skin suffers least. During exposure the skin is reddened because the blood vessels are enlarged and full of blood. The first redness soon passes. The real red of sunburn, the kind that counts, comes on a few hours later.

Strong sunlight is so powerful that it actually destroys some of the tiny cells of which the skin is composed, and dead cells are poisons. These poisons irritate the nerves, you all know how sunburn really burns long after the sun has set, and they irritate the blood vessels, too. Nature tries to remove them by sending more blood to the skin, and so washing them away.

At the same time nature tries to protect the skin against further exposure by building a sunshade within the skin itself, and this sun shade is called a coat of tan.

It is a layer of little grains of pigment which appears in the skin, and the more there are of the pigment granules, the darker the coat of tan, and the less light can get through to injure the skin beneath.

PAIN—HUMANITY'S MOST FREQUENT COMPLAINT, A SYMTOM THAT SOME THING IS WRONG

By Charles F. Kuhn, M. D.
Detroit, Michigan

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Pain, the most frequent and universal complaint of humanity, is but a symptom, the cause of which may be quite remoote from the area involved. It may be sharp, dull, severe, mild, lancinating, shooting, darting, griping, colicky, interrupted or continuous

In any region of the body pain is a signal or cry for relief from insult to a nerve, caused by infection or a pressure from injury or disease in the surrounding structures.

Pain in the head is commonly due to eye strain, anemia, nephritis, errors in diet, blood disease, sinus or brain infection, tumor, or hemorrhage.

Pain in the throat suggests some form of infection in the pharynx, tonsils or larynx.

Pain in the ear may be the warning of an abscess of the external or middle ear, infection of the mastoid cells, or transmitted reflexly frim the throat.

Pain in the chest is occasioned by lung infection, pleurisy, intercostal neuralgia, and angina pectoris, hardening of the blood vessels of the heart,

Pain in the abdomen, always a danger signal, may be caused by appendicitis, gall bladder, ulcer of the stomach or intenstine, a diseased pancreas, spleen, or hernia. Pain in the stomach or intestines is the most fresuent ailment complained of by man, woman or child. It is commonly considered an attack of indigestion or due to constipation.

The popular, yet dangerous treatment consists of cathartics and enemas. Food is allowed and the patient is permitted to be about. This error has caused many deaths from appendicitis, intestinal or stomach perforations, obstructions, or peritonitis. Competent medical advice should be sought at once. No self medication or food allowed, and the patient should be kept quiet in bed.

Pain in a nerve, known as neuritis or neuralgia, referred to lightly and subjected to ordinary remedies for relief, demands careful investigation. A tumor or constitutional disease may be the exciting cause.

Pain in the muscle or joint, generally referred to as rheumatic, is due to infection from teeth, tonsils, or other focal areas. The source should be sought and removed at the earliest moment. Pain in a bone or joint, if due to infection or injury, should be given immediate attention. Neglect or delay might result in permanent deformity or death.

Pain in the lower limbs and feet is not infrequently caused by broken or relaxed arches, ill fitting shoes, faulty posture in walking or standing, also lowered vitality and resistance.

Pain in the back, frequently referred to as lumbago, may be due diseased kidneys, inflamed pelvic joints, spinal or pelvic disease.

Frequent physical examinations will detect early the cause of the pain. By observing the warning signals of pain, the patient will avert much suffering, reduce the amount of sickness, and increase the life span.

"Sunset Trail" Holds Interest of Music Loving Patrons of the Peninsula

Indian Operetta Aids Men and Women of San Mateo Co. Relief Home

The presentation of "The Sunset Trail" holds a two-fold interest for peninsula patrons of music in that it affords an opportunity to witness this unusual Indian operetta by Charles Wakefield Cadman, foremost of American composers, and who has as well won especial renown for his Indian folk songs, and also permits of aiding the men and women now living at the San Mateo County Relief Home, for whom these performances are to be given, the benefit being sponsored by a committee of representative residents of which Dr. William Otis Callaway is chairman and Horace W. Amphlett, treasurer. The Cadman operetta will be offered at the Woodland theatre, Hillsborough, Friday and Saturday evening, August 19 and 20, anl will mark the first production made at night in the open sky theatre, which should prove particularly fitting for the plot unfolding the story of Indian life. It is also worthy of note that Mr. Cadman will himself conduct at both performances, as well as direct the final rehearsals of orchestra and chorus in which will be heard some hundred trained voices.

The words and lyrics of "The Sunset Trail" were written by the late Gilbert Moyle of Berkeley. It is in a prologue and two acts, the former picturing the life of the Redman when at peace. Act 1 reveals his discontent because of forced submission to the whites, an uneasiness fostered by Grey Wolf, an aggressive warrior of the tribe who urges renewed struggle for their one-time freedom, but "Old Man" urges peace and obedience to the White Father. Medicine Man is in accord with the urgings of Grey Wolf, an aggressive warrior of the tribe and after a council the Big Chief orders his tribesmen into the hills to commune with the Great Spirit.

Act 2 reveals the camp at break of day. Redfeather, the romantic brave around whom the interest centers, appears to serenade his sweetheart Wildflower, who emerging from her tepee joins him in a duet and permits him to enfold her in his blanket, establishing the tribal betrothal. Scene II discovers Medicine Man with his warriors returning from the hills to arouse the camp warning them of the coming of the white soldiers, and led by Big Chief and Grey Wolf the braves depart to engage in warfare only to meet defeat, and beaten they return accompanied by Redfeather who has been mortally wounded. Wildflower rushes to him, and he dies in her arms promising to wait for her in the Spirit Land, and led by the chief the tribe join in prayer to the Great Spirit promising submission to the will of Destiny.

The leading roles have been assigned to such well and favorably known artists as Harold E. Dana, baritone; Gwnfi Jones, tenor; Mynard Jones, basso and the only feminine role, that of Wildflower will be sang by Mary Groom Richards.

Tickets for the performance of "The Sunet Trail" may be obtained at the office of the committe, 18 Third avenue, San Mateo.

Bridge Franchise Before Supervisors

For the second time representatives of R. W. Thompson, New York engineer, appeared before the board of supervisors to request a franchise for a bridge across San Francisco bay from Candlestick point in the northern part of this county to a point in the City of Alameda. The hearing on Monday at the regular session of the board of supervisors was a continuation of a previous meeting, at which time it was stated that backing Thompson in his proposal to construct a bridge were Coy Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, and Dr. Gustav Lilienthal, well-known bridge builder of New York.

Representatives of the Thompson interests explained the proposed bridge and stated that the structure would be entirely financed by an eastern finantial firm.

Following the request of the Thompson interests, Supervisors McSheehy, Haroldson and Havener of San Francisco appeared before the borad and asked that the franchise be not granted. The granting of the franchise to Thompson, they stated, would effectually block all hopes of San Francisco securing permission from the War department for a bridge at Rincon hill. The present proposal, they said, was exactly the same as that recently refused to the Carey interests, and they asked that the same action be taken by the board.

John F. Davis of Burlingame appeared in favor of granting the franchise, stating that the bridge would mean much to South San Francisco and to the peninsula as a whole.

Davis was followed by John J. McGrath of San Mateo, who as representative of six different development associations, opposed the bridge. The granting of the bridge franchise, he stated, would mean nothing to San Mateo county and would hamper the building of the Little Coyote bridge near San Mateo. This latter bridge, he stated, would be built as soon as a permit from the War Department could be secured.

The matter was finally laid over for a period of two weeks for further consideration.

SCHOOL APPORTIONMENT ANNOUNCED BY COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools, has notified by Wm. John Cooper, state superintendent of public instruction, that the following estimated apportionment of money from the state to San Mateo county will be made for the current school year, July 1, 1927 to June 30, 1928:

Elementary Schools	$244,160.29
High Schools	82,494.55
Junior College	40,400.00
Total	$367,054.84

Farm Telephone Has Revolutionized Farm Life and Farm Methods in U. S.

In Emergencies the Telephone Brings Timely Assistance to the American Farmer

By John B. O'Brien

AMERICAN business men have earned the universal soubriquet of "go-getters". The successful farmer of today, like the successful business man, has comprehensive contacts which were unknown to him a generation ago and which have more or less revolutionized farm life and farm methods.

The question naturally arises—what factors have contributed most toward the success of the American farmer? Primarily, his adoption of modern methods of farming and marketing, involving the utilization of modern conveniences, is the answer. In the category of modern conveniences, and in this day and age, they are, in a large measure, necessities, comes the Telephone. This medium of contact is firmly established on the modern farm and the increase in the value of the telephone to the farmer during the last twenty years constitutes one of the principal reasons for the recognized place it now occupies on the farm.

Telephone Now Interconnecting

Twenty years ago a farmer desiring to call the locality in which his market was located, could not unless the lines of the company to which his telephone was connected also served the market community. In 1907, there were over 2,000,000 telephones in the United States which were confined in the scope of their calls to the limited areas served by the company to which they were connected. At the present time, universal service has essentially been attained, as is evidenced by the fact that there are only about 170,000 telephones, or less than 1% of the total number in the country, which do not connect with the nation-wide network of lines comprising the Bell System. The comprehensive telephone service now available to the farmer is equally beneficial as an aid to production as well as in marketing. Today, with the modern farm implements, in use, such as gang ploughs, harrows, cultivators and tractors, it is just as essential for the larger manufacturers of farm implements to maintain service branches as it is for automobile manufacturers to carry on similar activities. In the event of breakdowns of farm machinery where parts and service are required with a minimum of delay, the telephone is of immeasurable value in arranging for repairs.

occasions when lives of farm animals are in danger, when advice from a veterinarian is needed in a great hurry. The head of a farmers' organization in Wisconsin made a survey among representative farmers and, as a result, listed the chief value of the telephone in order of importance as follows:

Aid in marketing farm products; accident and health insurance; fire prevention and insurance; visiting friends and relatives; getting extra help for crops; ability to get long distance calls; getting important news quickly.

Its Social Value

The social value of the telephone is not to be passed over lightly. Important as it is in any community, it is doubly so on the farm where people do not live in close communion, where it is impossible to talk with one's neighbor over the back fence, on the front lawn or at the corner drugstore. The housewife on the farm enjoys friends just as much as does her town or city cousin, and perhaps realizes the value of friendship all the more. The farmer's telephone enables her to converse with mother, sister, or friend on occasions, when otherwise such contacts would be impossible for long periods of time. We are all gregarious animals. We are healthy mentally only when we can associate or at least communicate with others of our kind. The farmer's telephone, in obliterating distance, has likewise developed neighborliness and thereby brought greater contentment to the rural life of the country.

Thus, the telephone is not only a convenience—it is a social and economic necessity on the farm.

reach of a physician. Before the days of the telephone when medical or surgical aid was needed, no matter how great the necessity for haste, a slow trip to the physician's office and a slow return were involved. Today, in cases of emergencies, assistance can be secured sometimes in a matter of minutes where once hours were required.

When a fire breaks out in a town or city, there are organized fire fighters ready to battle the flames. When fire starts on a farm, one man or one family, unaided, are almost helpless. Here again the telephone plays its part in summoning aid and in notifying the countryside.

From an economic standpoint, the farmer's telephone has brought the markets to his very door, as it were. Before the days of the telephone, when the farmer had hogs or grain or fruit or other products to sell, he took them to market when they were ready and sold them for what he could get. If prices were right, he made a profit. If they were low, he often lost money. Nowadays, he doesn't go to market blindly. He awaits the opportune moment, if possible, the time when market conditions are most favorable for him, and he does this by means of the telephone. With the intercommunicating system now available, he is able to get in touch and keep in close touch with distant markets, with the result that his sales are made, not on guess work, but are based on accurate knowledge of conditions as they exist at the time.

There are many other ways in which the telephone is of inestimable value to the farmer. In addition to emergencies when human lives are involved, there are

The Telephone as Insurance

In fact, the progressive farmer regards his telephone as insurance—insurance against fire, insurance against sudden illness, insurance against burglars, etc.

In rural districts, the telephone serves its useful purposes daily. Before the days of the telephones, if a binder went out of service in the harvest season when the grain is ripe and every moment in the field counts, it was necessary to stop operations and drive to town. often a trip of hours, only to find a dealer would have to communicate with the jobber in the city before he could arrange to get the necessary part. Nowadays the farmer doesn't have to drive to town—he telephones. The merchant, if he hasn't the necessary part, does not have to write to the city—he telephones. And the missing part is secured and in place at a minimum loss of time and effort.

A farmer or one of his helpers is injured or taken suddenly ill. Many farms are not within easy

WOODSIDE

James V. Neuman and family moved into their new home on the Canyada road last week. The house is built upon a knoll and commands a view of the mountain range to the west and a large section of the bay to the east, with the Mount Hamilton range in the distance. The five acres surrounding the house will be made into a park featuring the native trees of California. The various employees of Neuman Bros. on Wednesday presented Mr. and Mrs. Neuman with a valuable etching to be hung in the new home.

On Tuesday afternoon a fire broke out in the pumping plant belonging to Mortimer Fleishacker situated near the foot of King's mountain. The pump house was destroyed and the large motor and pump were ruined. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an over-heated motor.

The Woodside School opened its Fall term on Monday with an initial registration of sixty. The fear of infantile paralysis, which has never made an appearance in Woodside, somewhat reduced the expected registration.

A night school will be opened at the Portola school house on Monday next. This will be a branch of the Sequoia Union High Night school, and will be under its direction. While it will be conducted largely for the purpose of assisting foreigners in their preparation for naturalization, an opportunity will be offered to all those who desire to add to their educational accomplishment.

Dr. Bradford Leavitt left on Sunday for a motor trip into Oregon which will include several days spent at Crater Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bourn entertained at a dinner on Monday evening at their home, Filoli, complimenting Miss Katherine Kuhn and Mr. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, whose wedding will take place next week.

Oliver Gish and Romaine Ealy rode their motorcycles to Fresno on Monday, expecting to spend the week in that neighborhood but the temperature of over 100 degrees did not fit with their idea of a vacation, so they turned right around and came home again.

Miss Ruth Gabriel, teacher of art in the Oakland schools, will be a week-end guest of Mrs. Bradford Leavitt.

Gophers have been unusually destructive this year and are being fought with poison, trap and gopher gun. Arthur Hooper is enclosing his whole house garden comprising about two acres with a fine mesh wire fence sunk about two feet into the ground to prevent the inroads of the pests.

The Masonic bodies of Redwood City gathered in a picnic at Bear Gulch canyon on Sunday last.

Local Court Judgment Sustained Upon Appeal

Judgment of Superior Judge George H. Buck awarding the Thermetite Construction company $910 against R. A. Hiscox, Artie M. Hiscox and the Municipal Properties was affirmed in a decision handed down by the district court of appeals. The defendants appealed the decision. The Thermotite Company was allowed to recover costs.

The company constructed a fish pool and water garden for the Hiscoxs at their home on the Devonshire estate at a cost of $250. In addition, the defendants owed it $646 for materials furnished for their home.

UP-TO-DATE MAPS ISSUED

All road maps issued by the Touring Bureau of the California State Automobile Association are marked by trained clerks at the time of issuance to show exact conditions that will be encountered by the motorist. The Bureau gathers daily reports on detour, surface conditions and other

Defendant Wins Suit

Suit for $784.24 damages filed in the Superior court here by Charles Shirley against the MacRorie-McLaren nursery company, J. Rodriguez and T. Van Wisen was ended Wednesday when a decision was handed down by Judge George H. Buck in favor of the defendants.

The suit followed an automobile accident which occured when a car driven by the plaintiff struck a machine operated by Rodriguez, an employee of the nursery firm as he was turning to enter the nursery from the state highway.

Judgment was rendered in favor of the defendants and the plaintiff was ordered to pay costs of the suit. A cross complaint by Van Wisen for $359.20 alleged to be due as repairs on the truck was thrown out by the judge.

The defendants were represented by Attorneys Ross and Ross of this city. District Attorney Frank Ilin Swart represented Van Wisen, and the plaintiff was represented by G. P. Sanford.

MRS. WOODHAMS OF PESCADERO PASSES AWAY

Her death preceeded by a protracted illness, Mrs. Margaret Woodhams, wife of A. W. Woodhams of Pescadero, passed away at her home in that community on Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Woodhams is survived by her husband and by two daughters, Mrs. Charles Mattei and Mrs. E. E. Woods. Two other daughters, the Misses Alice and Helen Woodhams passed away recently. A sister, Mrs. J. Bennett also survives.

Funeral services will be held today from the family home in Pescadero. Interment will be in the family plot in the Pescadero cemetery. The James Crowe has charge of the arrangements.

TRIO ARRESTED FOR THEFT OF GRAVEL

An attempt to remove a truck load of gravel from the premises of the Redwood Material Company caused the arrest early Sunday morning of three men, from San Francisco by Redwood City police. The men were arrested by Officer McAuliffe and gave their names and ages as Villa Senora, 27, William Marsh, 24, and Walter Thompson, 34, all steel workers of San Francisco.

The three men were released on bail, and later appeared before City Recorder Mansfield who fined them $10 each.

FINAL DECREE OF DIVORCE GRANTED MRS. QUINFELT

A final decree of divorce was granted on Wednesday to Mrs. Josephine Quinfelt from her husband, William J. Quinfelt, who is charged in the complaint with having wilfully deserted his wife and family on April 11, 1924. The couple were married October 11, 1913.

The custody of two minor children was granted to the mother, and $60 monthly was allowed for their support.

INTERLOCUTORY DECREE OF DIVORCE GRANTED

Mrs. Elizabeth Cochrane was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce Wednesday from Thomas Cochrane. The plaintiff alleges that Cochrane on January 1, 1925, willfully deserted her. The couple were married in San Francisco on October 9, 1908.

Mrs. Cochrane was granted the custody of two children, Thomas Jr., 17, and Edith M., 11, Attorney Jas. T. O'Keefe, representing Mrs. Cochrane stated that a property settlement had been effected out of court.

NEVADA DAY PICNIC TO BE AUGUST 28TH

The annual Nevada reunion picnic will be held at Mosswood Park, Oakland, Calif., on August 28th., according to the announcement made by C. W. Pangburn, a former resident of the Sagebrush State, who is now residing in that city. The picnic is held each year on the fourth Sunday of Augsut, and each year has seen its scope of activities increased.

Many people living around the San Francisco bay and as far south as Los Angeles make the trip annually merely for the sake of meeting old acquaintances and to review the days they lived in Nevada.

It is expected that even a larger attendance than ever will be present. A large delegation will come from Nevada for the occasion.

MAYBERRY CHARGES DROPPED FOLLOWING AN INVESTIGATION

Following a thorough investigation by District Attorney Swart and City Recorder Mansfield, charges of rape preferred against Archie Mayberry, truck driver of this city, were dismissed. During the investigation that testimony of the complaining witness proved to be of such a contradictory and inconsistent sort that the investigators expressed the opinion that the charge against the local man had been trumped up and was without foundation.

There is no real substitute for
"POSITIVE AGITATION"

To see what "Positive Agitation" really means in rug cleaning, try the Greater Hoover alongside any of the ordinary type vacuum cleaners.

Not merely on dust and surface dirt—any cleaner will whisk that up with ease.

But try it on the deeply embedded grit that gnaws the life out of carpeting, and on the stubborn clinging lint that's so hard to remove.

Then you'll see with startling clearness why "it pays to know the difference between The Hoover and a vacuum cleaner," and why, when it comes to thorough cleaning, there is no real substitute for "Positive Agitation."

New Motor Laws Explained by Attorney

Changes Made In Operators License

By George E. Sanford
General Attorney California State Automobile Association

Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles written by George E. Sanford, general attorney of the California State Automobile Association, explaining the new provisions of the California Vehicle Act adopted by the last legislature. These changes in the motoring law are of importance to every automobile owner and operator, and a clear understanding of the provisions of the law will make for greater safety on street and highway.)

Three changes in the state law have to do with operator's license cards, held by every motorist. One requires examination of all new drivers, another provides for a system of cancellation and renewal of cards and the third makes reckless driving cause for revocation.

The first of these will be treated in this article because it is of prime importance as safety legislation. The mandatory requirement of examination for new applicants should not be confused with the provision which makes its optional with the State Motor Vehicle Division to subject present license holders to examination on renewal. At present no such cancellation and renewal order has been issued and until it is, those who already have their license cards need not concern themselves with the subject of examination.

Heretofore it has been optional with the State Division as to whether new appliants should be examined. But hereafter all who first apply for a driving license must be examined by the Motor Vehicle Division. The examination must be given within five days after date of application in the county of applicant's residence. Examining officers will be representatives of the State Division of Motor Vehicles. The purpose of the examination is to determine the applicant's physical and mental fitness to operate a motor vehicle and the tests prescribed in the law include driving ability, knowledge of the law and physical condition.

The law states first that the applicant's hearing and eyesight shall be tested as well as ability to understand warning and direction signs. The applicant shall give an actual demonstration of ability in driving tests under the supervision of the examining officer. A test shall be given of the applicant's knowledge and understanding of the State Motor Vehicle Law.

RELEASED FROM JAIL, ARRESTED AGAIN IS FATE OF WM. LENNON

Released from the jail here when he appeared before Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin Tuesday morning, William Lennon, 34, who gives his residence as Palo Alto, and states that he is sometimes a stenographer and sometimes a laborer, continued his way toward San Francisco. Lennon had been arrested on a charge of vagrancy when found drunk in Menlo Park.

Lennon hal only gone as far as San Mateo, however, when he was again under arrest, this time suspicioned with entering a private residence of San Mateo through an open window.

The home entered at 308 Clark drive, San Mateo, was being painted, and several windows were left open so that air could hasten the drying of the fresh paint. Mrs. Rudolph Baum, owner of the house, heard prowlers shortly after midnight, and called the police immediatey. When Officer Henry Boyle arrived, however, there was no trace of any intruder in the house, so he scouted the neighborhool, and encountered Lennon.

Red Bluff—Work started on construction of new post office building here.

George W. Lovey has lost track of a trunk. He thinks he loaned it to someone and will be thankfcl if the party will bring it around to his office in the Germania hall block.

The Grand hotel, one of the pioneer buildings of the town, is in ashes. Early Monday morning one of the roomers, William Daley, was aroused by some crackling noise. It was soon discovered that the building was on fire. An alarm was given, and in a few moments the roomers were crowding for an outer place of safety. Many of them lost their belongings. The books and effects of Judge Fitzpatrick's law office were saved. Even the large safe was removed. The telephone office, though having but little furniture, everything was saved. Owing to the time the fire started and the headway it had gained before it was discovered, the fire department was under a great disadvantage. Nevertheless, noble work was done in preventing the fire was not extinguished, the men were fearless at their post of duty and we cannot say too much for them in this behalf. They were most of the time within a few feet of the fire and in the midst of danger. When the south wall fell, ex-Chief Davis and Ed Barry were badly injured. The former is now able to be about but cannot resume work. Barry was not so badly hurt. While the fire was not extingcished, the buildings adjoining were saved by the bravery and courageous work of the firemen.

George A. Kreiss, youngest son of Jacob Kreiss, the pioneer of Portola valley, was married to Miss Daisy Henry of Napa last Wednesday. Mr. Kreiss is well known in musical circles being for some time the leader of the Woodside band.

CORNERS JURY EXHONERATES CAR DRIVER

R. E. Davis, driver of the car which ran over Ernest Brohlin, a plasterer of Oakland, near the Woodside road on July 9th, was exhonorated of the blame of the accident by a coroner's jury Tuesday. Brohlin died at the Community hospital about a week after the accident, from internal injuries sustained when one wheel of Davis' machine passed across his body.

Brohlin and a companion were to have started work on a house under construction just south of the city limits of Redwood City. They had come on Sunday and were prepared to camp near the house while at work on it.

The two men pitched their tent near the side of the road and retired for the night. After dark R. E. Davis, intending to pull off the road and stop, turned his car from the road without seeing the tent in which the two men were asleep, and ran through it. One wheel passed completely over Brohlin.

The injured man was removed to the Redwood City hospital and after emergency treatments there was removed on Monday morning to the Community hospital at Beresford.

$20 FINE FOLLOWS FLY PAPER EPISODE

Following his conviction last Thursday in Justice of the Peace Ray Griffin's court on a charge of rubbing fly paper on a boy's face, Philip Greco was fined $20 on Friday. Warren Ostrum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Ostrum was the complaining witness.

SURFACED ROADS

One-sixth of the total of 3,000,000 miles of highway in the United States is surfaced, according to the California State Automobile Association.

JURY BLAMES DRIVER WHO KILLS BOY

C. P. Nichols of Santa Clara was blamed by a coroners jury here Tuesday for the death of little James Jensen, Jr., following an automobile accident which occured on the state highway just south of Redwood City on August 9th. The jury listened to the evidence of James Jensen, father of the boy and driver of the car in which he was riding; of Constable F. B. Grill, an eye witness to the accident; and Dr. F. P. Gregory who attended the boy immediately after the cresh.

The evidence showed that Jensen with his family was driving slowly on the extreme right hand side of the road. The other driver coming from the opposite direction was cutting around other cars, and was evidently driving at a high rate of speed. When nearly to Jensen's car, he cut out of the line and across the road, striking the Jensen machine. In the crash which followed the boy, who was sitting in the rear seat, was thrown forward, and struck his head on the robe rail, fracturing his skull. He died a short time later.

The inquest was conducted jointly by Coroner W. A. Brooke and District Attorney Swart. Swart indicated that he intended to take some action in the case. Nichols failed to appear either in person or by an attorney.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY KEEP WELL

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Here is Proof

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the papers," Mrs. Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company. "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results from its use." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight, I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. My condition made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask him, 'How is housekeeping?' and he says, 'It is just like being in Heaven!' Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?

Men of Proved Nerve Scared by Microphone

Prince William of Sweden is a renowned animal hunter, who stands 6 feet 6 inches in his stocking feet, but, from an incident which has just become known, he was completely cowed by the microphone. It was apparently a premonition on his part that he was to have an unusual experience. At any rate, as he walked into the deadened studio and the broadcasting was just about to begin, he mopped his brow and exclaimed in an agonized tone: "This is terrible!"

As related by M. H. Aylesworth, Berlenbach, who fought young Stribling in the roped arena, suffered an even worse experience. Berlenbach was to give a five-minute talk on "Bravery in the Prize Ring," but became so terrified that he strode out of the studio, never to return.

Girlhood Revived by Extremes of Fashion

Dr. Jabez Jackson, president of the American Medical association, said recently that any woman who could yet wouldn't improve her appearance with cosmetics ought to be spanked.

Doctor Jackson, elaborating this novel point of view, said at a luncheon in Kansas City:

"When a woman goes in for cosmetics and beauty culture her health improves. Take the daring new fashions. They stimulate the circulation. Did you know it?

"A grande dame, got up in the latest and most daring thing from Paris, stopped at her doctor's table at the Ritz the other day and laughed and said:

"'Doctor, I adore these new fashions. They make me feel so girlish. Every time a man looks at me I blush.'"—Detroit Free Press.

STORY FROM THE START

Garth Guthrie, Canadian war veteran, having to live in the open on account of weakened lungs, is factor of a Hudson's Bay post at Elkwan. He came back from the conflict with a permanently scarred face, which he realizes cost him the love of his fiancee, Edith Falconer. Sir Charles Guthrie, his brother, is a millionaire war profiteer. With Etienne Savanne, halfbreed, his firm friend, Garth meets Doctor Quarrier, geologist, and his sister Joan. Their schooner has drifted ashore. Quarrier complains he has been robbed by a man known as "Laughing McDonald." At Elkwan an Indian girl, Ninda, tuberculosis victim, whom Garth has befriended, is dying. Joan, trained war nurse, cares for Ninda, but the girl dies. Charles Guthrie writes reproaching his brother for not coming home. Charles' wife assures him Ethel still loves him, but Garth in his heart knows better. Three of McDonald's party visit Elkwan seeking to buy gun shells. From them Garth learns of evil talk among the Indians concerning him and Ninda.

CHAPTER V

The winter wood cut, the geese salted and cached, the whitefish platform groaning with the spoil of the nets which would not be lifted until the ice, Guthrie and Etienne sat in council of war.

"How many of our people are wintering on the island?" asked Garth.

The half-breed closed his small eyes, his face contracted into a network of lines as he counted the families which had, through the summer, crossed the strait to hunt on the great island, instead of taking the river trail for the forest and muskegs of the Elkwan headwaters.

"We got twelve—fifteen hunter dere. Attawapiskat and Kapiskau got more dan dat."

"That means a lot of fox pelts if the mice and rabbits are plentiful, and the litters came through the summer."

Etienne scowled. "We not get mooch of eet," he muttered. "Dem peopl' geeve de hunter beeg price."

It was true. Cut off from the island until the ice set hard, as the post was, while the hunters could reach the schooner wintering at Seal Cove and get more for their fur, the outlook was indeed gloomy. But Garth had no idea of allowing these strangers to come into his territory and take the valuable fox trade of Akimiski away from him without a struggle. While he remained in the employ of the company, he would give the best that he had of loyalty and service. His pride was involved; and as he searched for a solution of the problem which the presence of this schooner presented, the desire to beat this free-trader in his bold try for the priceless silver and black fox of Akimiski obsessed his thoughts.

From Graham at Attawapiskat and Boucher at Kapiskau, he anticipated little aid or comfort. The former was an inactive, oldish man with a large up-river trade, and Boucher, according to Cameron at Albany, already in a panic over the rumor of the machine guns aboard McDonald's schooner. So Garth had decided that he would ignore his colleagues on the coast south of him and play a lone hand.

For a space the two men nursed their pipes in silence; then the face of the white man suddenly lighted.

"Saul Souci!" he cried. "Why didn't we think of him before? Etienne, we'll hunt up old Saul and send him to winter on the island. He's got two or three sons there, and besides being Treaty Chief of the Crees, is a sort of medicine man, shaman, isn't he?"

Blowing a cloud of smoke through his teeth, the half-breed grunted his disapproval. "He winter on de Little Elkwan—up een de Winisk countree. Eet weel tak' long tam to find heem."

"Oh, I know it will be difficult to get him across the strait before the ice, but we'll put him over somehow."

"We get frozen een wid our cano' up riviere," protested the hard-headed bushman.

"We'll take a birch canoe and leave it—carry the little toboggan to come out with—the dogs can follow the shore going up," urged the enthusiastic Guthrie.

Knowing the country, Etienne realized only too well the difficulty of traveling between seasons; breaking the young ice in the quiet reaches of the river until compelled to abandon the canoe; then the wait for the closing of the stream and the snow. For weeks the thin ice of the Elkwan would be a trap for the unwary dog team. To the trail-wise Etienne, it was a foolish venture; to the man whose only thought was the salvage of the fox trade, a necessity.

"How you get heem to de island?"

"If the channel and strait are open, we'll take him in the York boat. We can wait for the wind and if there isn't too much flow ice, we'll get him across."

Etienne knocked out his pipe. His bright eyes snapped as he looked at Guthrie. "Eef you say so, I go. But we are two dam' fool."

"But we've got to give these people a fight for that fur—it's worth thousands to us."

"All right, boss, we fight." But when the veteran voyager told his wife of the mad purpose of Guthrie, her dark face grayed with fear at the thought of the November journey over the thin ice of the Elkwan.

For a week, with his two best huskies, Castor and Pollux, and Shot, following opposite banks of the river to avoid fighting, Garth and Etienne poled and paddled and tracked past black spruce and poplar grown shores from the latter of which the frost had stripped the leaves.

At the mouth of the Little Elkwan the winter suddenly shut down, locking lakes and deadwaters with a shell too thick for their battering poles to break a channel through for their canoe, and the men in search of Saul Souci were prisoners. Somewhere up the little Elkwan ran the trap-lines of the man, to reach whom they had slaved for days with ice-crusted poles and paddles, and freezing hands, while their hot breaths rose in columns on the keen air; but until a fall of snow, or some bitter nights to bridge the river trail, they could not move. However, there were five hungry mouths to feet, so they hunted back in the muskeg for caribou. At last, when severe frost had sealed the slower flowing reaches of the river with three-inch ice, they hitched the huskies, and started. Shot, who the winter previous had learned to draw Garth's trapping sled, refusing to team with the larger dogs, ran loose.

The second day out they learned from an Indian that Souci's main camp was two sleeps up the river. And thanks to the trained eyes of Etienne, the sled avoided the traps of shell ice over the swift water and the second night turned in to a winter camp.

At the challenge of his dogs, Saul Souci, Treaty Chief of the Elkwan Crees, lean, grizzled, taciturn, with bony features, over which leather-like skin lined with wrinkles was tightly drawn, pushed through the flap of his tipi.

"Kequay!" he said, showing no surprise at the strange appearance of the Elkwan people one hundred and fifty miles inland at a time when no sane Indian traveled the river. The three shook hands and, first feeding and chaining the dogs to trees, entered the smoky tent where Saul's wife and two sons were eating from a copper kettle.

Not until his guests had been served with caribou stew and tea did Souci question them as to the purpose of their coming. Then he said in Cree, which Etienne interpreted to Garth: "You take a hard moon to travel up the Elkwan."

"We could not wait, so started in the canoe," replied Etienne in the same language.

"You did not break through the ice."

"No."

"The geese have passed: it will not be long now until the big snow," vouchsafed the hunter, lighting his pipe.

"How are the game signs since the snow?"

"There are plenty of mink and otter, but the lynx and fox seem to have left the valley."

Etienne's eyes brightened at the remark.

"There is much fox sign on Akimiski." This was hearsay over a month old, but the half-breed knew he would need every possible argument to gain Souci's ear to his proposition.

"My sons will be glad. Three of them are there."

"We have come to talk to you about the island."

Souci's bony face clouded as he met the frowning look of his wife.

"I told you at the spring trade I would not go."

"But there is much news since then," replied Etienne in the same colorless tones as the other.

"News? What has happened?"

Then the astute Savanne displayed his knowledge of the Indian temperament. Slowly, without emotion, he described the coming of McDonald, the free-trader, to the west coast, with a ship full of cheap trade goods, and inferior flour, tea and sugar. It was sudden wealth he was after, and to get it he would bribe the hunters, receive them with what looked like better prices in trade for their fox skins. But in a year—two years—he would be through—would not return, and they would come to the company again, begging for a "debt." But the company, who had taken care of their fathers and grandfathers through many lean years, would remember who had gone to the free-trader. There would be no "advance" for these in the years to come, and their women and children would whimper through the long snows.

He, Sau. Souci, a man held in great esteem by the company, could save these hunters from the cheap guns and trade goods of McDonald, who cared nothing for the Crees. The company, whose goods were honest, as he knew, whose sugar was not sanded, whose powder never failed, and whose tea soothed the stomachs of the Crees, was as ancient as the hills, and as permanent. It would always remain on the bay to trade with the Indians with goods that never changed. He, Saul Souci, his father and his father's father had been the friend of the Hudson's Bay—had never failed it. Would he fail it now when he was needed to turn the young hunters at Akimiski from their folly?

For a long time the smoke-filled tipi was silent as the swart face of Souci was grave with thought. Avoiding the anxious eyes of his wife, he sat cross-legged staring into the small fire in the center of the wigwam. With eyes red and throat raw from the smoke of the tipi fire, Garth impatiently watched the old Indian's stolid face.

The wife of Saul, unable to stifle her fear, at length loosed upon him a torrent of reproach—only to be silenced by a stern command. At last, the Indian, evidently having come to a decision, turned to the half-breed who waited for his answer.

"My trap-lines reach far into the four winds. My fish and meat cache is heavy. There are many caribou in the muskeg; at Akimiski there are none—only rabbits and wolves and foxes."

Ignorant of the drift of Souci's remarks, Garth watched Etienne's impassive face. Suddenly his heart quickened, as a faint gleam entered the slit-like eyes of his friend. Would old Souci come, after all?

"It is true," continued the Indian, "the company is my friend. It was the friend of my father. It is better that the young men trade with it than with these people who come and go. If I go, how shall I live, for I have no cache at Akimiski? How shall I cross the water if the ice has not set?

Etienne's dark face wrinkled with pleasure. Souci would go. "The company will make you its man, if you will go," he said. "We will set you across the open water in the York boat and give you supplies for the winter, and your sons—what they need. And if you hold the young men, there will be new guns for you and your sons and a debt double the hunt your family brings in." Etienne extended his hand to seal the bargain.

"We may not cross the water before the Christmas trade—then we will lose the fur, for the trade will go to their camps," suggested Saul.

"We will cross you to the island at once, if you will return with us now."

The wife of Saul was already wailing in protest at his decision, but the dark faces of his sons betrayed no feeling.

"My sons and my wife will stay here," said the Indian without a glance at those interested. "I will go down river with you, for the winter will not wait."

Etienne turned to the smiling Guthrie. "You see, he will go with us at once. Now, we will mak' de troubl' for McDonal' Ha! Ha! to get all dose fox skin." And he repeated his conversation with Saul.

* * * * * * *

Through the stinging air of the blue dawn, two dog teams hurried down river. On the second night, arriving at the cache of caribou hung in a tree for the return trip, they found that wolverines had destroyed the meat. To feed seven dogs it was necessary to hunt, for Saul had come with a light sled.

The following morning, as the east grayed, the men started for the neighboring muskeg in search of the early feeding caribou. With Shot, whose rigid war training to absolute silence and obedience made it possible to take him on a still hunt, which was out of the question with the yelping and uncontrollable huskies. Garth waited on the edge of a barren for the light.

"Smell something, Shot?" he asked the dog, who stood beside him in the spruce scrub, dilating his nostrils as he sniffed the keen air. As yet the dusk hung over the white barren in a gray blur. If the blue-coated deer of the north were out there scraping with round-toed hoofs the snow from the moss, the light would soon betray them. Trembling with excitement, for the great airedale had served his novitiate the winter previous on the Raft, and knew for what they waited, Shot tested the air. The man whose mittened hand rested on the shaggy back beside him wondered, as the two crouched waiting for the daylight, if to the memory of his dog returned the ghosts of similar watches in Flemish shellholes and listening posts. As his eyes strained to pierce the graying blanket which shrouded the muskeg, Guthrie found himself tracing the parapets of imagined trenches — listening for suspicious sounds. Then the first light filtered over the barren, and he searched for the gray-blue shapes against the snow.

Suddenly the dog at his side stiffened on his toes, his iron dorsal muscles set, and the tremor which swept the shaggy body, with the suppressed whine, signaled the taint in the air.

"Steady, Shot!"

The trained war dog crouched mute—athrill with the scent of game in his nostrils. Gradually the exploring eyes of the hunter made out dim shapes, a long rifle shot distant. Slowly, with his dog at his heels, Garth circled the barren up-wind under cover of the scrub, until he had an easy shot at two cows and a bull.

"Steady, Shot!" he whispered, and took careful aim. At the flash of the Ross, the bull leaped forward, ran a few feet into the wind and crumpled on the snow. As the bewildered cows circled up-wind, Guthrie fired again. A hurt cow plunged forward, seeking the scrub edging the barren, and reaching it, disappeared.

"Go get 'em, Shot!" Like a wraith, the airedale crossed the barren in pursuit, as Guthrie followed, upbraiding himself for his poor shooting. A hundred yards inside the scrub he found the caribou pulled down and dispatched by the dog.

Replacing his rifle in its skin case and resting it against a spruce, Garth was hastily dressing out the meat before the hide froze while Shot explored the game trails of the vicinity, when a low laugh sounded behind him. Looking up, he saw, watching him, the Ojibwa, Joe Mokoman, who called himself the father of Ninda.

Guthrie casually rose to his feet, skinning knife in hand, as he measured the sinister face of the man who faced him, fingering the action of his gun. It was clear from the glint in the small eyes that the Ojibwa still nursed the memory of his expulsion from the trade-house. How far would he dare go? Garth asked himself.

"Bo'-jo'! The caribou are fat this year," he said coolly, moving toward the Indian. But the Ojibwa pointed the muzzle of his rifle at Garth's chest as he stepped forward.

"You move, I shoot!"

The threat of the despised Indian deeply flicked the pride of the Canadian veteran, but he was helpless. It was inconceivable that Mokoman meant to wreak personal vengeance of such a nature on a Hudson's Bay factor—shoot him in cold blood. Yet what was he after, then?

With a great show of rage and surprise, Garth burst out with: "What d'you mean by throwing a gun on me? You know what you'll get for this? What d'you want?"

One Valuable Point

"Ancestor worship," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "is valuable if it reminds us that we ought to so demean ourselves as to deserve respect from future generations." — Washington Star.

SATIN FROCKS FOR AUTUMN; COLORFUL VELVET CHAPEAUX

NOT in fashion's realm will "silver and gold have I none" be voiced, for early arriving autumn frocks gleam with touches of not only gold and silver, but of copper, steel, brass and, yes, tin if you please. It is a fact, some genius has devised an extremely novel trimming which accomplishes a handsome effect by riveting bits of tin over multi-colored strands of silk.

Autumn's style horoscope is proclaiming the metal vogue in no uncertain terms. Imagine such a frock as this, and it is, to say the least, "perfectly stunning"—black satin one-piece model studded all over with steel nailheads which are riveted into the very fabric. At the proper waistline a belt is simulated by working in gold metal nailheads, in solid form. The effect is thrilling, and presents a season of fascinating revelations in the way of metallic embellishment.

The picture shows the enlivening effect of metal embroidery on black satin. Seems as if black crepe satin frocks are crowding the style stage in numbers greater than ever. A surprising quota gleam with unique and exceedingly handsome touches of metal, after the manner of this illustration.

Dressy afternoon ensembles of black velvet are also written in the book of fashion—and their appearance will not be deferred until late fall, for nowadays velvet is so sheer and supple it lays claim to being an all-year-round fabric. Owing to its suppleness velvet is indulging in any amount of shirring. Often the skirt fullness is accomplished in this way. In harmony with the trend toward metal decoration, the blouse, preferably of white or flesh georgette, is embroidered in gold and silver paillettes.

There is also a discreet use of metal on many a simple cloth frock, such as a few nailheads on cuffs and collar or an outlining of metal clasps on hem edges.

Velvet is apparently going to have a marked influence on the new season's millinery. Even now women of smart fashion are choosing cunning velvet models for midseason wear.

At last, judging from the "advance guard" of millinery for fall, we are going to have some hats that are really different, so that when we go strolling down the street we are not going to have the feeling that every other hat we come face to face with is first cousin to the one we have on. In other words fashion is doing little tricks of decoration here and there that are making millinery decidedly more feminine and taking it out of the realm of monotony.

Interesting variety is achieved in a number of different ways. Just take a look at the upper left hat which comes from the studios of the famous French creator, Madame Agnes. She deftly takes two strips of harmonizing velvet in the colors of wild rose and sistine, cuts them with large saw-tooth edges which just match when sewn together; and then shirrs these joinings so that when pressed down they give the exact effect of crushed roses.

Then the hat in the center introduces a new idea which comes from the clever fingers of Eliane. This is of "buccaneer" red velvet which is very finely stitched in unique diamond and diagonal patterns.

In the hat at the upper right Eliane gives us a sample of entirely different type of stitching and shirring in a hat which is more formal and made of silk velvet in the color called "Mother Goose." The unique shirring effect is carried on to the crown tip; and as this hat is worn well down on the neck and tipped back, it gives a very interesting effect.

Madame Georgette gives a touch of something different again in the hat at the lower left, which is along cloche lines of black velvet with an applique design of white appearing at over it and worked under the softly folded portions.

At the lower right Germaine-Page introduces a decorative note on a cloche of navy-blue velvet with a cenfture of camellias of glacier-blue velvet which are held down flat with a tiny nose-veil of double coarse mesh.

Mandarine in Chiffon Frocks

A new color upon fashion's horizon is mandarine, a combination of yellow and orange that is extremely beautiful. Chiffon dance frocks of this material are simply made and absolutely untrimmed, depending upon the color for their beauty.

White Satin for Evening

Frocks of white crepe satin are very smart for evening wear. With them are worn shawls of black Chantilly lace.

Gold Braid Trimming

All is not gold that glitters, but it can at least look like it. The ability to look like gold is the thing which has given impetus to the vogue of gold braid trimming and the great number of fancy gilt buttons now adorning dresses, hats and shoes.

Cotton Velvets

Cotton velvet short jackets, three-fourths length sports coats and two-piece sleeveless coat suits are quite popular now.

Gopher Star Wins Two Captaincies

Two captaincies in major sports have been voted to Mally Nydahl, University of Minnesota athlete, in a single year. As a senior Nydahl will head the basket-ball and baseball teams of the Gopher school next year. He is counted upon also as a mainstay in the backfield of the football team.

Nydahl went in as a substitute halfback in the Minnesota-Wisconsin football game last autumn and ran back a punt 75 yards to give his team a last-minute victory. He matched the feat in the baseball season by delivering a home run with the bases full.

WOULDN'T PLAY BALL ON SUNDAY

Not a Fanatic on Subject, but Rickey Obeys Mother.

Seamed and wrinkled by his generation in the service of baseball, Joe Sugden, coach of the Phillies, recently unbosomed himself of a secret that has tortured the imagination of fan and player alike for years. Indeed, curiosity, on and off the diamond, has been harassed and excited by this unrevealed tale of the diamond—the reason why Branch Rickey never would play Sunday baseball.

Rickey was manager of the Browns after an inconspicuous role as player. He became vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals, present monarchs of bat and ball, a position in which he still sits in majesty and security. Rickey is a man of many ideas, many plans, many schemes, writes Gordon Mackay in the Indianapolis Star. To his diamond cronies he is a man to esteem, to admire and to hail as a pioneer in the sport which has become the great national delirium.

Therefore it was no surprise when Rickey developed a streak of stubbornness against playing on Sunday. It was just one of Rickey's queer whims, argued the fans or laughed the players. Yet none really knew the reason why the Browns' manager voluntarily exiled himself from the bench on the Sabbath.

No religious scruples dictated this course. It was filial obedience, a promise which he had made to his white-haired mother back in Lucasville, Ohio, when he first ventured into professional baseball. It was this same loyalty of son to parent that buttressed him in his stand, when jeered by fans, snubbed by players and scorned by the joyous souls who write the drama of baseball daily.

"Rickey told me why he wouldn't play baseball on Sunday," declared Sugden. When he told his mother he was going to join the Browns as a ball player, the sweet-faced old lady said to him:

"Branch, don't play on Sunday."

Rickey said he wouldn't and he never did. But he wasn't any fanatic about the question. He wasn't against Sunday baseball, as a lot of chaps think. He was panned and roasted well, and a lot of baseball writers used to go over him in pretty raw style.

Cuyler Going Good

Hazen ("Kiki") Cuyler, star outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who was out of the game considerably earlier in the season on account of injuries, has fully recovered and is putting up his usual clever game in the field and is also hitting the ball hard.

Important That Hurlers Have Well Trained Legs

Pitchers must have good legs. They need them as much, if not more, than infielders and outfielders. If the pitcher's legs are not properly trained he cannot pitch his best.

The fact that many pitchers weaken toward the close of a game can in most cases be traced to legs improperly trained or not trained at all. That is plausible. A man cannot pitch good ball when his underpinning is weary.

Pitchers do more work than the other players combined. The pitcher is the only man on the field who is continuously in action.

The pitcher, if he trained his legs properly and made it a point to develop speed, could win a few games himself by base running. A number of games are lost each year because the pitcher is helpless when on the bases.

Wants League Offices

The Washington Post says that President Clark Griffith of the Washingtons is endeavoring to obtain the establishment of the American league headquarters in Washington. At present the league's headquarters is in Chicago. However, the selection of E. S. Barnard, president of the Cleveland Indians, as head of the league succeeding Ban Johnson, the newspaper adds, indicates that Cleveland may be the strong rival for the headquarters as Cleveland is Barnard's home.

THE UNKNOWN JULIET

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

THE letter had suggested trouble even as Olivia took it from the mail box. Her husband's name was written in flowing characters across the thick creamy envelope, but though she had the right to open it she had not done so.

Olivia was a silver blonde, with large blue eyes and a face faintly pink with health and good nature. A sweet, sound, sensible young woman who loved her husband, her child, her house and could be content all day with cooking, sewing or working on some new lace pattern. She had been married four years and was confident that her happiness would last.

Now had come this letter from Lee's sister. Though she had never seen Juliet St. Maur she had heard much concerning her. Not, however, from Lee; he was silent on the subject. "We never got along together," was the most he said. Olivia wondered what he would do when she handed him the letter.

She took extra pains that night with her dinner, with Bobby, with herself. At the sound of Lee's footsteps she ran to open the door, holding Bobby, all gold and pink and blue, in her arms.

After dinner, seeming just to have remembered it, she gave Lee his sister's letter. Then she took Bobby and went out of the room, leaving him to read the message alone.

Presently he called her.

"Why didn't you open this?" he said. "It's from Juliet. She's coming to make us a visit."

They looked at each other gropingly. Then Olivia said softly:

"She will be welcomed, dear—because she is your sister."

Lee tugged at his thick, dark hair.

"What's got into her to want to come?" he wondered. "She won't like it here. Juliet's used to big hotels, expert service and six-course dinners. She's never had a home since Dudley died. Besides, darling, she didn't say when she was coming."

The days that followed were full of suspense. Olivia lived in a state of being always ready to hear the ring that should announce her guest. It was not easy.

She knew that she would not like Juliet, she was sure that Juliet would not like her. But Lee should not be disturbed by any discomforting knowledge if she could prevent it.

One late afternoon Olivia heard Bobby call. He was playing out of doors. As he ran to the house she saw him in his red coat and cap, tugging at his new red cart, a glowing little picture of joy and health. He was looking up into the face of a woman who had paused to speak to him. The woman was strikingly fashionable and she had a smart bag in her hand. Round the corner a taxi was just vanishing.

Juliet had arrived! Olivia's hand pressed her cheek, that little familiar gesture of consternation. Then she went quickly down the steps.

"I am sure this is our sister, Juliet," she said in her sweetest voice.

Juliet looked at Olivia out of dark eyes that were at once hard and cold. Her scornful lips moved. Then she held out her hand.

"I am afraid I have taken you by surprise," she said.

"Not at all. We have been looking for you ever since we got your letter," returned Olivia pleasantly.

Yet she knew as she conducted Juliet to her room that the problem confronting her was going to be even greater than she had feared.

Within an hour Juliet was established in the small bungalow. A vast wardrobe trunk, for which there was no room, had followed her. She had bathed and was waiting for Lee and her dinner, smartly clad in dusky red, her shining arms and shoulders bare, her short black hair, touched up at the temples, smooth with brilliantine rouge on her thin cheeks, a Turkish cigarette between her jeweled fingers.

"Same old Juliet!" Lee followed Olivia into the kitchen and put his arms around her. "Well, we're in for it. But why on earth did she leave the Westmore to come here? She won't like it. She's lived high ever since her marriage; Dudley was a go-getter. He made more money in one day than I can make in a year—not that I approve of making money by some of the ways he employed. However, he's gone—"

"Her life must be pretty empty," Olivia said gently. "No children, no home—" she turned away and began to dish up the potatoes.

For two days Juliet moved through the bungalow in beautiful clothes of the latest mode. Her perfume, her cigarette smoke followed her motions. She read, lounged, reflected, but she didn't offer to help with the housework. And she took no further notice of Bobby from that first day. Bobby, the irresistible cherub, lived and charmed under her very nose without more than a passing glance from her. He tried his little best to be friends with Auntie Jewel, as he called her, but Auntie Jewel would have none of him. Never had Olivia been so sorely tried, yet she strove to be brave, reposeful, generous. Lee got along very well because he didn't see the worst of it. But alone, Olivia would clasp her hands and say to herself:

"She's hard, she's heartless. Oh, what can she be staying for? I wish she would go away."

Olivia was making cake one morning while Juliet lounged at the window, sometimes looking on indifferently, sometimes puffing at the cigarette she held. On the lawn Bobby played with his little red cart.

"The child," Juliet spoke casually, "has strayed into the street. Shall I bring him back? Your hands are all flour."

"Yes, please." But Olivia, nervously wiping her hands, went to the door out of which Juliet had passed.

Bobby was stooping to fill his red cart with dust when there came a screech, a roar, and a great truck thundered down upon him. He did not hear his mother's scream.

With a leap and spring Juliet's little form was in the street, she clutched, whirled. The truck driver wrenched on his emergency brake, but not until the wheels had passed over the spot. Underneath was a little red cart, smashed. But Bobby was safe in the arms of a white-faced woman whose orchid frock showed how close she had been to peril.

"Hush! Don't cry over the cart," Juliet whispered into his hair. "You shall have another."

"Juliet, sister!" Olivia could say no more.

"I'd have done more than that for Bobby," Juliet breathed.

They sat on the davenport, close, with Bobby on Auntie Jewel's lap.

"I have tried not to love you," Juliet said. "But it's no use." After a moment she added: "I had a little boy, he lived two years—maybe Lee told you? I wasn't the kind of mother to him that you are to Bobby, so maybe I deserved to lose him. It was the same with Dudley—and now I am left with empty arms." Her voice broke.

At this sound Bobby put his arms about Juliet, snuggled close and kissed her. Olivia, too, drew nearer in tender homely sympathy and sudden affection for this newly revealed Juliet.

It was thus Lee found them when he came home from work.

Visitor Learned Just What James' Job Was

Away back in the year 1825, when the Harper brothers—James, John, Wesley and Fletcher—founded their famous publishing house, it fell to the lot of James, who was an apt story teller and a good all-round "mixer," to deal with the visitors who called to inspect their plant. One day an overinquisitive visitor who had learned as much about the affairs of the house as a stranger should know, but who persisted in learning more, said:

"You say, Mr. Harper, that your brother, John, sees to the accounts, Wesley superintends the correspondence and Fletcher keeps the business moving; but you haven't told me what you do."

"Oh, they leave me an enormous amount of work," replied the imperturbable publisher; "I have to do more than all of them put together."

"Indeed!" said the questioner; "and may I ask what your duties consist of?"

"Why, my dear sir, between you and me, they leave me to entertain the bores."

Roman Life in Britain

On the recommendation of the Ancient Monuments board, the Roman baths of Bath have been officially scheduled as a monument of national importance. Extensive excavations carried out by the corporation of Bath in the '80s disclosed the remains hidden for some thirteen centuries, and again during the past year or two by further excavations opened additional baths and hypocausts to view. The citizens of Bath have long realized that its Roman baths are the most important national monuments remaining of the health and recreative side of Roman life in Britain during the first three centuries.—London Mail.

Use of Gongs in China

Metal gongs have been put to varied and interesting uses as musical instruments. A Chinese gong was carried by servants before a mandarin in his sedan in olden times to give notice of his approach. A certain number of strokes at intervals indicated his rank. A gong also was carried in processions in China and beaten to drive away evil spirits. During eclipses it was beaten to frighten the heavenly dog as he was about to devour the moon. In Japan a kind of gong was suspended before idols and struck by worshipers to arouse the attention of the god.

We Are All Lawbreakers

Most people have a strong prejudice against the police. I never have had; wherever I go, I find policemen useful and polite. Occasionally a fool is given a policeman's club, but he soon is retired. Policemen daily forgive a hundred trespasses. It is a theory of the law that nine guilty men should escape rather than one innocent man be punished. This theory is carried out by everybody. The law is violated a thousand times for every arrest. This is true from necessity, or we should all be in jail.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

One of Dickens' Homes

Dickens wrote much of "Edwin Drood," his last and unfinished work, at 5 Marble Arch, W., London, which has just been acquired by a syndicate with a view to building a large moving picture house on the site. Lord Charles Beresford lived in the house for many years. There are many other associations of Dickens with the locality, which is rapidly changing its character owing to the great increase of traffic.

Colorful Suits for Beaches

The beaches are gay and colorful. The modern bathing suits of jersey have angular designs in contrasting colors appliqued upon them. One suit is red, black and white, while another is green with black and white appliques.

Plaited Jabot

A tailored blouse of white crepe de chene has a double plaited jabot of self-material, with a line of small pearl buttons down the center.

New Sleeves

The "half-way" is the latest sleeve, which would be the old-fashioned elbow-length sleeve except for its unusual cuts, which may be flared, circular, puffed or tight, with some odd cuff treatment.

Filet Dresses

The importance of filet lace increases as the season wears on. Blouses, jabots, inserts and many whole dresses use it combined with embroidery or fabrics.

Socialists Shaken by Experience of Russia

"Shaw and Wells and all that lot, now they've got a little money, have dropped sentimental socialism," said a New York publisher.

"I met Wells in the winter on the Riviera. We had lunch together in Grasse, and Wells said apologetically that Russia had proved to him and the other sentimental Socialists that they'd been playing a dangerous game.

"He said Russia proved that their prescriptions for the ills of the world had been as dangerous as the old lady's medicine chest. The old lady's doctor, you know, undertook one day to put her medicine chest in order. Mercy!

"The first bottle the doctor took up in his hand was labeled, 'No. 17. Salts, I think, or else arsenic.' The second was labeled 'No. 11. Headache powder, if not laudanum.' The third said, 'No. 4. Pain-killer, but if poisonous, antidote is in either No. 8 or No. 39.'"

Pretty Selfish

"Bill" Tilden, the tennis star, condemned, at a dinner on the Columbus, a wife who had ruined her husband by her extravagance and then eloped with a rich neighbor.

"She's worse," said Mr. Tilden, "than the girl who announced to her friends:

"'Well, I've thrown Tom over.'

"'Why?'

"'Why? Because, of course, I couldn't marry a man with a crooked nose.'

"'How did his nose get crooked?'

"'I broke it with my racket in a tennis game.'"

Medicine Sent by Raft

To give medical relief to the tiny West Indian island of St. Vincent, the liner Andes, on its way from South America to Lisbon recently, went 170 miles off its regular course. It had received a wireless S. O. S. that influenza was raging among the islanders and remedies were scarce. The liner approached within a mile of shore, and to prevent the disease spreading to the ship, the needed supplies were placed on a raft built for the purpose, the natives rowing out to it.

Flyosan still killing flies and mosquitoes by the millions

"Swatting" them scatters these deadly germs into the air which you and your family breathe.

Flyosan floats through your rooms. It destroys all these germs as well as all the flies and mosquitoes which carry them.

Here is the right insecticide for each insect:

FLYOSAN, Liquid Spray—kills flies and mosquitoes.

—ooo—

According to the statistics now being compled in the sheriff's office there were in the county jail at various times from July 1, 1927 to July 1, 1927, 953 prisoners. Of these 32 were women and 76 were juveniles and the remainder men. During the previous years there were 735 prisoners at the jail, of these 32 were juveniles and 36 women. By this it will be seen that the number of culprits in the county are on the increase. This upward tendencey in crime is perhaps lue to the growing population of the county.

SEARCH CONTINUED HERE IN MYSTERY DISAPPEARANCE

Mystery still surrounds the fate of George F. Charles, Redding accountant, whose wrecked machine was found last week at the foot of a cliff near Halfmoon Bay. Charles had visited his mother, Mrs. T. F. Leonard of Burlingame, and was seen on August 4th when he stopped at Burlingame on his way from Redding to Sacramento. He later wrote from the latter place, but since that time no word has been received from him. From Sacramento, however, he is reported to have gone to Sebastopol, where he left his little daughter with his sister, Mrs. J. F. Finnigan.

A man suffering from amnesia was found in Fallon, Nevada, and the description of this man tallied in many respects with that of Charles.

So certain were Redding officials that the amnesia victim held by the Fallon police was Charles, from descriptions interchanged by the authorities of the two cities, that Mrs. Charles was preparing to leave for Nevada.

The fact that the man was not Charles was established though when a photograph of the man was received by Sacramento police and shown to a Sacramento newspaper man who knew Charles for several years in Redding. He stated positively that the picture was not that of Charles.

No clue whatever which might solve the mystery of the disappearance of the accountant has been found.
